As far as the appearance of the gath- Mary F. Lewis. society were missing, and during the period of Lent the audiences are likely to be of the same character. The one was a party for the friends of Miss Kahn, at which they had an opportunity to welcome her home, and the assemblage was restricted to the younger friends of the host and hostess.

The observance of the feast of Mardi Gras requires something different from the frosty atmosphere of the North to make it anything like the celebration in New Orleans, where the entire population turns out to welcome the King and Queen of the Carnival. In other vears this festival has had a fitting observance in Nice, which in these days of conflict is barred to many Americans, but which was formerly famous for its flower parade. It requires also something of the spirit possessed by the Latin races to make it go with a snap and this element is found in New Orleans. Here the festivities of Tuesday night were all beld indoors and most of them were planned for some philanthropic purpose.

There is nothing in sight at present in the way of diversion save at Mi-Careme, when the charitably inclined will have yet more opportunities to part with their money. It was formerly the custom to restrict the festivities of the mid-Lenten period to one day, but now they seem in the opinion of some to be justified if they cover the entire week. Thus far but few weddings have been announced for Easter week, but without doubt announcements will shortly be sent out
